LONG RIDE HOME

Louis L'Amour

These vintage frontier stories introduce you to lawmen and loners, ranchers and renegades, gunslingers, cardsharps, bank robbers, etc. In these pages L'Amour brings to life such classic characters as the Cactus Kid, Tensleep Mooney, One-Eared Tim, and the gunfighter Kim Sartain. These are frontier tales as only L'Amour can tell them—stories that surprise like the sharp crack of a Winchester and move like the lonely howl of the wind across an empty plain on the long ride home.

LAST STAND AT PAPAGO WELLS

Louis L'Amour

Logan Cates knew the many ways the Arizona desert could kill a man. He had ridden the sunblasted dunes, tracked the Apache over barren lava beds, sheltered in the dry washes of this forbidding land. Above all, he knew a man needed water to survive. Cates rode to Papago Wells a few miles ahead of an Apache war party led by the vicious Churupati. There he met a dozen desert wanderers whom chance had led to the only water between Yuma and hell. There they came under siege by the Indians. And there they would make their stand—with little hope of living beyond the next day and only a hard man named Logan Cates to show them how to conquer their true enemy: fear.

ESCAPE

Barbara Delinsky

"A topical tale that resonates with timeless emotion." —People

"Captivating and moving.... Delinsky keeps the story moving with some nice twists ... rich characterizations, and real-feeling dilemmas that will keep readers hooked." —Publishers Weekly

Emily Aulenbach is an idealistic young lawyer who once dreamed of representing victims of corporate abuse, but who now spends her days in a cubicle arguing victims of tainted bottled water out of their rightful claims. She no longer connects to much in her life, period, with the exception of three things—her computer, her BlackBerry, and her watch. One day, she snaps. Without telling anyone where she is going, she heads north to New Hampshire, back to the small town where she spent a life-altering summer during her college years, and where she will set out to forge new relationships with long-lost friends and the person she once wanted to become.
